I use code behind to fetch the data from the list item using ListItemCollection listItemCollection = webPartManager.ListItemCollections["ListName"]; string resourceID = listItemCollection[1].Url; the problem is that the resource ID shows the webpage, but when I look in the source code the tag with the class name "infostatistics" has no styling applied to it. the code for the css file looks like this #inputField_1 {font-family: Calibri; font-size: 22px; font-weight: normal; height: 23px;} .infostatistics {width: 240px; margin-right: 20px; height: 150px; background-color: #d6d6d6;} If I change the css code to .infostatistics {width: 240px; margin-right: 20px; height: 150px; background-color: #d6d6d6;} all the styling is applied to the div. I feel like my css code is wrong, but I cannot figure out what it should be. Any help would be much appreciated. A: you should set your page template to be based on your style software company (not recommended). I was in a situation where a company wanted to hire me to work on a product for them, however they would only offer me the job if I paid them the full monthly salary of my income (which is not a lot, and could even be completely off). This, to me, was unacceptable as this would make it harder for me to buy groceries, cover rent, and basically not work because any income would be going to pay them. I talked about this to my friend and we came to the conclusion that I should have the option of simply quitting the job. The person who had offered the job was understanding about this and said that if I quit, I would then have to start at zero and would have to start the process all over again to get hired elsewhere.

Not only is this frustrating, but it is also very demeaning as you have to start from the bottom again without benefits in a new company. My main concern here is I do not want to get fired/quit and have to start the whole process again.

Should I get fired, I want to have the option of putting in for unemployment and seeing if I can get back up to speed without the hassle of being unemployed for over a year. I realize that companies need to cover their costs and make a living, but I'm just not sure why I should have to work and support the company in any way if I

The school is accredited by the American Council on Education (ACE) and the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE). The National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) and the American Council on Education (ACE) are independent, nonprofit private associations that prepare and accredit teachers and schools. These associations advise and develop standards and procedures to maintain an appropriate level of educational quality. This is required for all institutions of higher learning in the United States. NCATE and ACE have developed a Teacher Education Council to provide an impartial oversight program that continually assures the school is meeting the state standards and the demands of its profession. To maintain its NCATE and ACE accreditation, WJHS not only must meet the standards, but the school must continually demonstrate compliance. For added assurance, each NCATE accredited school is monitored continuously. One of NCATE's duties and responsibilities is to visit the school and make periodic site visits, interviews, and reviews of standards and policies with the institution. These visits are to assure that the standards and provisions of the NCATE Accreditation Handbook and Standards have been fulfilled. Each year, the school sends a portfolio of audit files to NCATE, to be reviewed. All audit files are reviewed by a visiting NCATE Standards Team, who make recommendations to NCATE about how the school should improve. NCATE then makes an assessment of the school's progress. NCATE accreditation requires the school to meet certain standards, based on the number of disciplines offered at the school, how the school's programs are connected to the Tennessee Standards and whether the school meets applicable teaching and other requirements. NCATE accreditation also requires schools to demonstrate how they uphold student and parental rights and protect students' privacy. Participating in NCATE is a
