The alkyl chain of the soybean oil (SBO) ester E(90) (1) was inserted into a kinked sheet-like geometry where π - π stacking occurred at the interface of two monolayers of polar head groups. A compression experiment was first performed in order to gain insights into the molecular behavior of E(90) with respect to its ideal sphere. No transition from the trans to the gauche conformation was observed in a SBO matrix, whereas the ester molecule E(90) displayed two conformations (TP and MG) according to the compression pressure. For E(90) associated with a SBO matrix, the molecular conformation with the trans-like geometry was energetically favored, but this was not the case for the MG conformation. Additional experiments were performed under high compression pressure to investigate the packing behavior of E(90) at the air/water interface. This study revealed that the polar head groups exerted an important effect on the molecular behavior of E(90). At an air/water interface, E(90) associated with a SBO matrix exhibited a tilted orientation. The PEG monolayer with a kinked geometry played an important role in inducing the tilted orientation of the polar heads of E(90). The combination of a kinked monolayer and the head group with a conformation with the gauche geometry produced the tilted orientation of the polar heads. Q: How do i check the value of array elements in array of Dictionaries? I have an array of dictionaries and what i'm trying to do is to loop through the array and check the value of one of the dictionary's key. If the value of that key is false, I want to change that value to true. The problem is the loop doesn't work. Here's what i have so far: var myDict = NSDictionary(contentsOfFile: NSBundle.mainBundle().pathForResource("myDict", ofType: "plist"));

There are various types of passenger hopper cars which are used for transporting flat, lightweight articles or articles which are difficult to handle. For example, such a hopper car may be used in combination with a box car (i.e., a type of gondola car) for transporting relatively large packages, such as a refrigerator. A wide variety of such hopper cars have been proposed in the past. For example, an upper portion of a hopper car for transporting articles may comprise a rigid platform supported on a plurality of wheels. An article handler is adapted to be moved along the platform for picking up and depositing the article thereon. It is generally desirable that such an article handler be capable of automated handling of the articles. However, many prior art article handlers typically include complicated mechanisms for lifting the articles therefrom and depositing the articles thereon. This is undesirable in that the complexity of the mechanism results in increased parts and maintenance costs. Moreover, it may be difficult to maintain proper operation of a relatively complex mechanism. A hopper car particularly adapted for use in combination with a box car is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 5,123,488. This patent discloses an article handler which is mounted to a platform for movement along the platform in a first direction for depositing and/or picking up articles from the platform. A tiltable side portion of the platform is rotated between a first position for transporting the articles and a second position for depositing the articles thereon. A latch mechanism is provided for retaining the platform in the first position and permitting pivotal movement of the platform. The latch mechanism also includes a manual release mechanism which is operative to release the latch mechanism for permitting movement of the platform between the first and second position
